

Conversation Starters

A shuffled deck of prompts for a one-to-one or small-group check-in. A student picks a card at random, and you talk about whatever it asks. There is no script beyond that, and no answer is wrong. Over time it is how a student gets used to talking to you.

How it works

Step	What happens
1	Give the cards a proper shuffle, so nobody, including you, knows which one is coming next.
2	A student pulls one card at random and reads it aloud, or hands it to you to read for them.
3	Let the conversation go wherever the prompt takes it. There is no right answer and no need to rush on, and if a card does not fit that day they can skip it and pick again.
4	One card is enough for a quick check-in. Work through several for a longer conversation.

Worth knowing

- It takes as little as two minutes, or as long as the conversation needs.
- Keep the deck wherever your check-ins tend to happen: a desk drawer, a folder, a coat pocket. The same set lasts all year, and you can add cards of your own over time.

The only preparation is one round of cutting.
