

Revision That Survives the Week

Each student plans one real week of revision on a sheet, then the slides break the plan three times, with a late night, a shift that moves and a friend who needs them, and they repair it each time. It takes an hour and one sheet per student. What they leave with is a plan built for the week they will actually have, and a way of fixing a plan instead of abandoning it.

Before you start. Some students will be planning around a home that does not give them an evening, and some have nowhere quiet to work. The sheet is theirs and is not collected, and the spare slot is there so that a plan can lose an evening without failing. If a student says there is no week to plan, help them find twenty-five minutes.

Print these

Page	What it is	How many
Page 2	The week sheet	One per student, in pencil
Page 3	Monday check-in cards, four to a sheet	Optional: slide 17 does the same job

The hour

Time	What happens	Slides
0 to 5	Title, then two minutes of private writing: the last plan they made, how long it lasted, what happened to it. Take a few answers.	1 to 3
5 to 15	What usually happens to a plan, the two kinds of plan, and the four rules. Every repair later uses one of the rules.	4 to 6
15 to 20	One Monday planned twice. Ask which version they would still be doing at half past six.	7
20 to 28	They plan the seven days ahead on the sheet, in pencil, with one slot crossed through as SPARE.	8
28 to 40	The three interruptions. Read each one out, then two minutes to repair the plan. Nobody starts again from scratch.	9 to 11
40 to 52	What survived, in pairs; then swap sheets and check each other's plan against the four rules.	12 to 13
52 to 58	One question, hands up, then the exit: first session written out in full, and where the sheet is going to live.	14 to 15
Monday	Two minutes at registration with last week's sheet out. Show slide 17 or hand out a card.	17

Worth knowing

- The sessions that survive all three interruptions are always the small, named ones. Let the room notice that rather than telling them. The Monday check-in is what makes this a habit rather than a lesson.

New resources go up on thepastoralguide.com as they are made. Leave your email there and you will hear when they do.

Seven days, in pencil

Up to two sessions a day, each one named: subject, topic, and what you will actually do. Cross one slot through and write SPARE.

Small: twenty-five minutes, one thing.

Named: subject, topic, what you will do.

One spare slot, on purpose.

This week only.

Day	Session one	Session two	Already fixed (work, family, training)
Monday
Tuesday
Wednesday
Thursday
Friday
Saturday
Sunday

My first session this week: day, time, subject, topic, what I will do

Where this sheet is going to live:

What survived last week?

Four to a sheet. Cut along the lines. Two minutes at registration, with last week's sheet out. Or show slide 17 and skip the printing.

MONDAY CHECK-IN

What survived?

How many sessions happened last week? Tick them on the old sheet.

Sessions done:

What moved, and where did it go?

First session this week:

The Pastoral Guide

MONDAY CHECK-IN

What survived?

How many sessions happened last week? Tick them on the old sheet.

Sessions done:

What moved, and where did it go?

First session this week:

The Pastoral Guide

MONDAY CHECK-IN

What survived?

How many sessions happened last week? Tick them on the old sheet.

Sessions done:

What moved, and where did it go?

First session this week:

The Pastoral Guide

MONDAY CHECK-IN

What survived?

How many sessions happened last week? Tick them on the old sheet.

Sessions done:

What moved, and where did it go?

First session this week:

The Pastoral Guide

